

I chose floatlabels.js because of its usefulness compared to negative impact on the site. The additional load time is negligible compared to the added functionality. Floatlabels.js aides in the ability to enstill the aspects of Poke-yoke in your input fields.

I created a simulated login form or user info field to demonstrate how the plugin works. I created it in revealjs because it was a platform I am familiar with already.